Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0400 on Tuesday 18 May 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Sunny spells and further showers, some heavy.

Today:
Starting mostly dry with sunny spells, but showers already in the southwest, developing more widely again, becoming heavy with risk of hail and thunder. Cloudy with rain or drizzle in the far north edging south into mainland Scotland.

Tonight:
Showers easing for many areas with clear spells developing, although further showers, some heavy in the south. Cloudier in the far north with rain at times.

Wednesday:
Heavy showers in south, developing again in other areas through the morning, but drier with more sunshine in southwest UK for the afternoon. Rain in central Scotland turning more showery.

Outlook for Thursday to Saturday:
Remaining very unsettled with some wet and very windy weather for many on Thursday and Friday, gales possible in the south. Less windy with showers Saturday and staying cool.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.